LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 1 .- Several Imtion with Miss Madeline Poliard's suit against his friend.

Soon after this interview appeared it is said tien. Duke received a letter from Mrs. Blackburn. Owing to the close relations in that tien. Duke had with the late too, lake P. Hackburn, and the no less cordial friends in his with had always existed between Mrs. Blackburn and himself and his tamily, that he delicate subject. She told him that had he delicate subject. She told him that he delicate is subject. She told him that had he delicate subject. She told him that he delicate him to be tried in Washington to the serious chart in the subject of the latter had be ween to trial will not be tried in Washington on the ground that she would soon become on the swarf degree treason, telony and breach of the peace, be privileged from crest during from the same of the peace, be privileged from crest during from the same of the same at the sessions of their respective on the swarf development on the same of the swarf degree to the told she were the same of the same at the sessions of their respective on the same at the sessions of their respective on the same at the sessions of their respective on her deep sense of wrong and outrage, and characterized the conduct of Col. Breckin-ridge in the strongest terms she could consmand. She concluded with the declaration that were her husband slive he would hold Breckinridge personally accountable for the indignity and insult she had been offered.

It appears further that Senator Joe Blackburn, who was half-brother to the late Gov. Blackburn, became acquainted with the relations existing between Col. Breckfordge and Miss Pollard, and when he heard how Mrx. Blackburn had been imposed on he declared on several occasions and without secrecy that he intended holding Breckinridge responsible for his conduct. The suit followed, however, and the presumption is that senator Blackburn become taking action.

Mrx. Diage Blackburn has always held a high position in society. She was a Miss thurcaill, of English stock, and collaterally descended from the famous Duke of Maribarough. John Churchill, one of the younger sons of the family, came to this country about the indiale of the last century and actived in Middlesex County, Va. The old assessed is still there, a well-preserved relie of Colonial architecture. The Kentucky branch of the lamily have all been persons of wealth and social importance. Mrx Blackburn and Mrx. Zane, her widowed sister, have speak their winters in Washington for several years and were recognized leaders of the Southern society of that city.
